A DUI revocation has been placed on your record because you have been convicted of Driving Under the Influence (DUI) by a court.

If you were granted early reinstatement and a hardship license was issued for your administrative suspension (DUBAL/Refusal at the time of citation), the hardship license has since been invalidated due to the DUI revocation. This means that you will be required to re-apply for a hardship license (if desired) for your DUI revocation.

The length of revocation depends on the number of prior DUI convictions. The standard revocation periods are listed below. However, a court can authorize a longer revocation period. (When this happens, an additional court-directed revocation will be added to your record that will run concurrent with the DUI revocation.)

Table with 2 columns: Conviction, Revocation Period. Rows include: First conviction (180 days to 1 year), Second conviction within 5 years of first conviction (5 years), Second conviction after 5 years of first conviction (180 days to 1 year), Third conviction within 10 years of second conviction (10 years), Third conviction after 10 years of second conviction (180 days to 1 year), Fourth conviction where at least 1 prior conviction occurred after 7/1/82 (Permanent).

You have two options when you have this revocation on your record.

- #1 WAIT OUT THE REVOCATION PERIOD - Once the expiration date has passed, you will need to:
- Provide proof of enrollment or completion of DUI School effective after the offense date that will be scanned and subject to verification.
- Provide a release from incarceration (if applicable).
- If issuing a replacement license, unless you are already Real ID compliant, you must present documents that establish your identity pursuant to the Real ID Act.
